Differences between molecular and traditional seminomas of the testis. We describe the clinical course of a 21-year-old man with bilateral testicular tumors and somatic findings that were consistent with congenital adrenal hyperplasia. The tumors were classified as seminomas by histologic criteria and cytogenetics, and as mediastinal seminoma by clinical criteria. The tumors were simultaneously excised, and the biopsy of the left testicle revealed it to be testicular Leydig cell tumor. Tumor markers were used to assess the prognosis for the seminoma and Leydig cell tumor. Their biochemistry was very similar, and only in the seminoma could any antigenic difference be detected between the mediastinal and testicular tumors. The mediastinal f30f4ceada
